

IGCSE MUSIC

Why should I study Music?

- Studying music keeps options open at later stages in your education.
- If you are considering music as a career it's essential
- Skills learned in music are highly transferable. Many musicians go on to be extremely successful in other fields.
- It offers you a soul-warming hobby for life!

Content:

- Listening - we study Baroque, Classical, Romantic music, but also music with words, for stage and screen, for small ensemble (including music from around the world), and for dance
- Composition - the formation and development of musical ideas
- Performance - prepared externally with a 1-1 teacher

How am I going to be assessed?

- Listening - one 75min paper, where you need to demonstrate an awareness and understanding of a huge range of music of all genres
- Composition - creating two contrasting compositions in any genre or style
- Performance - at least 4mins of performance recorded in lesson time. Again, the music performed can be in just about any genre or style. At least one piece must be performed with others as part of an ensemble, but it is perfectly possible for this to be a duet.

Important if I want to:

- Study Music at a higher level later on
- Explore a career in any artistic subject
- Have an eye-catching way to demonstrate a rounded character
